The old manor-house, formerly belonging to the Brookes's, and now to Mr. Girdler, is another curious specimen of those ancient gentlemen's seats like that at Pipe Ridware, and at Moseley, &c. formerly very numerous in this county, built chiefly of wood and plaster, with gable ends, transom windows, &c. as shewn in the annexed view. It is inhabited by a tenant. (1798) [SHAW I 389]
